Introduction

CCM-2026, the fourth edition of the National Symposium on Convergence of Chemistry and Materials (CCM), is organized to explore science at the interface of Chemistry and Material Science. It will embrace several aspects of this interface through experiments, theory, and computation. This symposium, an effort from the Department of Chemistry, BITS Pilani, Hyderabad campus, is conceived to bring scientists, researchers, and industrial partners working at the interface of Chemistry and Materials on the same platform with an eye toward great interactions and exchange of thoughts. The theme of the symposium encompasses diverse research topics ranging from small molecules and nanoparticles to macromolecules and biomaterials. Talks and presentations from renowned academicians, industry partners, and young researchers will be organized. We take this fantastic opportunity to expose graduate, post-graduate, Ph.D. students, and postdoctoral researchers to the current state-of-the-art in science and technology.

BITS-Pilani University

The Birla Institute of Technology & Science Pilani (BITS Pilani) is a premier Indian Institute of international repute. In 1964, the Institute was incepted by Dr. G. D. Birla as the Founder Chairman. It has a rich legacy and has produced eminent educationists, researchers, and industrialists. BITS is a multi-campus university with four campuses located in Pilani, Goa, Hyderabad, and Dubai (UAE). During its five decades of existence as a University, BITS Pilani has established strong linkages with Universities, Research Institutes, Industries, R&D organizations, and Financial Institutions through its University-Industry linkage and University Immersion programs.
